To Our Patrons.

On the twenty-ninth of this month we shall issue number one of volume fortyeight, of the MAINE FARMER, with a new and complete typographical outfit. The proprietors and editors are determined to spare no expense, and omit no effort, to make the FARMER, the best agricultural and family paper in New England, and more useful and valuable to Maine readers, than any other paper of its class, published in the country. All connected with this establishment will endeavor in every way to deserve a continuance of the generous support, which for nearly half a century, has been given this paper, and to entitle it to the increased regard and confidence of the people of Maine. The departments devoted to farm and household economy, its digest of domestic and foreign news, its selection of useful and entertaining literary and miscellaneous reading, for old and young, will be carefully and conscientiously collected and arranged, to meet the needs and tastes of its readers, and the requirements of a first class egricultural family journal. Special detailed market reports will be given, and the columns of the paper will be gravings of animals, fruit, plants, and other objects of interest to our readers. The great expense we are incurring for the proposed improvements of the paper, rennew volume with as large a number of advance paying subscribers as possible. We have many names upon our list who are in arrears for the paper for one, two, three and four years, some even for a longer period. If our subscribers will but look over their yellow slips upon their paper and i found in debt, kindly send the amount due. while it may be a small matter to each subscriber, it will be a great aid to us, as the aggregated sums due amount to many thou sands of dollars. A little attention give to this matter on the part of each subscriber, will be of infinite benefit to the publish ers, and will enable them to give their readers in every way, an improved and better

The Pacific Railways' Sinking Fund.

When Congress granted acts of incorpor ation to the Pacific Railroads it reserved the right to alter and amend the original laws by which these corporations were created. The Forty-fifth Congress passed what was popularly known as the Thurman act. This law was framed with great care by Senator Thurman of Ohio and was and persistently refused to recognize, evebill, the estimates of the indebtedness of these roads to the Government were, the at the maturity of the subsidy mortgages 1895, the Union and Central Pacific would owe, about one hundred and nineteen millions of dollars, after deducting the reim bursements for services rendered.

Each road made a case, bot of which involved the constitutionality of the act of May 7, 1878, which found their way, in due course of time, into the Sudecision was rendered on these cases last spring, but owing to a great pressure of business, opinions were not prepared and the Court sustained the act, the opinion being written by Chief Justice Waite. The Court held "that with the exception of the land grant, little, if anything, except the earnings of the company, can be depended on to meet these obligations when they mature. These earnings, the company, after been dividing from time to time among its stockholders without laying by anything to to become due.
